Dates: 1889 - 2004

Size: 11.5 linear feet (26 boxes)

Abstract:

Donald H. Estes (1936-2005) was a San Diego based historian and educator who wrote and taught about the Japanese American experience in both Southern California and the nation. This collection contains many of the books and articles he wrote, as well as his extensive research files. It also includes materials he collected from the Japanese American community in order to document their internment during World War II.

Biographical/Historical Notes:

Donald Hamilton Estes was born in Nebraska in 1936. He and his family moved to the San Diego's North Park neighborhood in 1939. He entered San Diego City College in 1954, and completed BA and Master's degrees from San Diego State University by 1966. In 1960, Estes began teaching Advanced History and Government at La Jolla High School, leaving the school in 1967 to become Professor of History and Political Science at San Diego City College. From 1969 to 1973, he also served as Adjunct Professor of Education at the University of California at San Diego, and held a similar position at San Diego State University during 1974-1975. Also during the 1970s, Estes performed curriculum development work for the California Department of Education and served as a Fellowships Program Evaluator for the National Endowment for the Humanities. In 1986, San Diego City College awarded Estes the Golden Apple Award for Outstanding Teaching. He retired from San Diego City College in 2003.

Estes sat on the Board of the San Diego Chapter of the Japanese American Citizens League from 1967 on, and served twice as president. He was a founding member of the Japanese American Historical Society of San Diego (JAHSSD) and served that organization as historian and curator. Estes was among the first historians to serve on the Scholarly Advisory Board of the Japanese American National Museum beginning in 1989.

Estes' oral history interviews and research produced six books, published between 1971 and 1996. He also authored numerous scholarly articles, many published in the Journal of San Diego History. Estes also curated exhibitions and served as adviser or director of several films and video productions.

At the time of his death, Estes was working on an extensive history of the Japanese in America. According to Ben Segawa, founding president and executive director of the Japanese American Historical Society of San Diego, "Estes was the acknowledged expert on the history of our community, the heart and soul of our organization. He was known as an inspiring teacher and in his scholarly pursuits, addressed what he called a natural void that was waiting to be filled."

Estes both collected and generated significant materials that would otherwise not be available for research today. He died on May 7, 2005 at the age of 68.

Scope and Content:

Donald H. Estes (1936-2005) was a San Diego based historian and educator who wrote and taught about the Japanese American experience in Southern California and the nation. The bulk of this collection contains his research files for his many books and articles, his writings, as well as the sources he collected from the Japanese American community in order to document their internment during World War II.

The research materials contain original documents as well as copies. Included are state and federal government reports and publications, photographs, and ephemera related to Japanese Americans and their activities. Resources also detail Japanese American businesses and organizations within the communities. Contents are in both English and Japanese.

The writings of Donald Estes are also included as well as project materials related to California's Alien Land Laws, and a range of unique primary source materials pertinent to the study of Japanese and Japanese Americans in San Diego and California.

This collection reflects his work as an educator and scholar, and represent an important resource for understanding Estes and his passion for and contributions to the study of Japanese Americans as well as being a comprehensive resource for students and scholars of the internment, resettlement and redress experiences of San Diego Japanese Americans.

Series I: WWII Internment

Scope and Content:

This series contains materials related to the Japanese American internment experience during World War II. The primary focus is on Poston internment camp, but there is information on other camps. Included are camp newsletters, literature, forms, directories / rosters, government reports, photographs and personal correspondence. There are also materials pertaining to relocation and resettlement. Source materials are both original and copies. Of specific interest are a comprehensive collection of camp newsletters, school yearbooks and letters to Clara Breed at San Diego Public Library. Significant documents include FBI rosters of property holdings by Japanese in San Diego County (1940) and the collected poetry of the Gila River Senryu Poem Club (1944-1945).

Series V: JACL Projects

Scope and Content:

Estes project files reflect his involvement in early work by the Japanese American Citizens League (JACL) and other California groups to improve the study of Japanese American history. Documents from the 1970s includes a variety of project proposals, conferences and reports on UCLA's Asian American Studies Center, curriculum development and film projects by Visual Communications of Los Angeles, as well as JACL workshops and handbooks by Estes for researching Japanese American history at the local level, and for understanding the evacuation and relocation. Also included are bibliographies and collected syllabi for early Asian American studies and Ethnic Studies courses. The 1990s material shows his work for JACL to produce an updated curriculum and resource guide and conduct teacher training workshops.

Series VI: UCLA Primary Sources Project

Scope and Content:

During 1971-1972 Estes received a grant, took a sabbatical, and worked with the Asian American Study Center at UCLA on a project that aimed to gather primary source materials on the history of the Japanese American community in San Diego County and Southern California. This series contains the results of this work; most of it is Japanese language material such as diaries, memoirs and published selections from Japanese books and newspapers. Estes arranged for the translation of Japanese sources to English, and one or both version is included. The series includes directories of Japanese residing in San Diego, some with biographical information.

Series VII: Japanese in Pre-WWII San Diego

Scope and Content:

These card files are a product of the research by Don Estes using the San Diego City and County directories. The aim appears to be to document those of Japanese ancestry living in pre-WII San Diego.

The information obtained from the early directories refers primarily to San Diego City. After 1918, San Diego County and a business section may be included. Some of the information is undated and refers to the postal districts of the residents as well as including land and ownership details.
